A COWARDLY SHOT.

Juan Telles of this City Narrowly Escapes Death by an Unknown Enemy.

Juan Telles of this city had a narrow escape Monday from death at the hands of an unknown enemy. While he was making adobes at his residence a short distance west of town he heard two rifle shots at a short interval and also heard the whistle of a bullet for each report. Thinking that some hunter or some marksman was merely a little careless of the direction in which he was shooting, Telles paid no attention to the matter but went on with his work. A moment later, however, a third shot was fired and it is due entirely to the fact that he stooped low at exactly the proper instant that Juan Telles now survives to tell the tale, for a bullet struck him over the point of the right shoulder blade, ranged upward and lodged under the skin about six inches above the point of entrance. Had he been standing erect when struck the leaden missile would doubtless have passed completely through him. Doctor Blackington was summoned and extracted the bullet. The wounded man will probably recover. The man who did the shooting was concealed behind the brow of a ridge about 500 yards distant. His trail was followed to where it crossed the Magdalena track and then into the southern part of the city. Who he was is not known, but it is hoped that he may yet be found out and his crime properly punished.

On motion, duly seconded and carried, it was ordered that each county have representation at the territorial convention on the basis of one delegate to every 150 votes cast for the republican candidate at the last election.
